years ago before the era of innovation began there were systems that paved the way for what we know today as the vending machine. There once was a box and within that box were sections of potato chips, cookies candy, breathe mints and gum.

Some of the comestibles that you see today in what is now called vending machines were in those boxes. There was a slot in these boxes where you were required to place a designated amount of money for the cost of the goods that you had taken. This constituted and validated an actual sale and purchase. These methods were based on honor and trust. We called it the honor system. Our entire society was based on the honor system. We paid for our gas on the honor system. It was pump your gas first and pay for it later. This system worked for many years successfully. People followed instructions well back then. They innately did what was right. The first course of action with them was to do the right thing anything else was just not an option.

Not paying for gas was unheard of, until... the dreaded dubious aberrant behaviors of some, uncorrected of course- recidivism at its best, resulted in a new way of doing things, hence; putting an end to a once effective way of living, making it more costly for us all.

The loss prevention methods were more costly and that cost was and still is passed on to the patron. The consumer pays for the ills of society in every aspect.

Our society adjusts to the ills of society because we are forced to, it's our defense mechanism. When we are perpetually required to build defense mechanisms to protect ourselves from each other to the point that it drastically changes society adversely, we become a place of hurts and brokenness making us weak and fragile. We can't look back and change the damages of the past, but in moving forward we can decide to remain a society of brokenness or become a place of strength and honor that has recovered from its ills. We can move forward with an attitude of resilience stemmed from adherence to a necessary order. That order is honor and trust so that we are restored to that place that once made it a monument to say "in God we trust". In God there is order, honor and trust. No society can exist without it.

Safenets GTD is taking you back to the days of honor, are you ready to be restored?

The Honor System

We're opening the door to a whole new thing.
It's benevolence with style.

No more shallow thinking, it's time to invest in the things that matter; people. People with a cause make things happen, that matter.

Mission Statement

Safenets Going the Distance is a professional organization designed with you in mind. The concept is benign and forthright. We aim to mitigate the factors that lead to missing persons with a valuable concept “Know Before You Go” we keep this concept on the forefront of your cognition because we find that it is necessary for you to always be fully equipped with as much knowledge as possible. Knowledge is power. The majority of human victimization is stemmed from being caught off guard due to unpreparedness largely associated with a lack of knowledge about a person, place or thing. Having the right resources to keep you safe is imperative. It’s called investing in you and your family. You are a valuable part of your family and when you live a good, healthy safe life it’s rewarding for them. You are invaluable and Safenets GTD acknowledges and appreciates your value. It’s worth protecting. That’s why Safenets GTD does what we can to offer you the protection that you and your family needs as much as we can.

We realize that resources at any given time can be ceased or limited therefore we provide the tools that you need to continue to protect those you love and cherish, that starts with you. We provide the basic fundamentals of safety. Safenets GTD is working hard to achieve roadside safety with major improvement projects that continue to harness a safer, more easily accessible commute. In addition to the infrastructure projects we have introduced and will continue to be involved in, our Buddy On The Road Program is one of many that we believe will continue to keep you abreast and connected to people, places and things to ensure your safety as much as possible. We invest in and implement the tools to help you protect yourself and others who care about safety.

We at Safenets GTD believe that the primary factors which determine your success in life is right at your fingertips when you choose to partner with us. We make life a little easier, less stressful and a lot more enjoyable while we keep you connected to the people, places and things you want to know.

We are a resource center for pragmatic and empirical information. Safenets GTD is an organization offering to help relieve some of the stresses of life by introducing a myriad of methods to relax, entertain, and challenge your intellect. We are the learning tool that enables you to learn and grow every time you access our service. We stimulate your moral compass while providing you with the information that you need to understand the needs of you and those around you. Our goal is to make it relaxing, stimulating, refreshing and rewarding. We accomplished our goal when we created and implemented the product and service.

Safenets GTD was created and founded by Nikena Leason and continues to be a beacon of hope for many who value themselves as a priceless treasure. We realize that an investment in your self can be the best investment of all. We are a network with a product and service that offers endless benefits.

It's attractive to stand for something more than yourself. It's alluring to stand for someone else too. That's true elegance.

Remembering those who are gone but not forgotten, or missing and still wanted. A memory goes along way with every sip.

TAKE A SIP GIVE A TIP

There's something to be said about a great cup of coffee and a great memory. It makes every day worth it. It's the reflection of good times that makes all other times possible.

YOUR NEXT SIP COULD LEAD TO A TIP

Memories keep you alive and the memory of them could help keep them alive.

While you're enjoying this  you may want to think of how you are helping this . They need you, it may be a face someone will recognize. Your next Sip could lead to a Tip.

Where Do At Risk Kids Come From

At risk kids come from at risk parents. Typically it is the choice's that parents have made that has lead to the child's circumstances. The role models they receive in their household are not equivalent with what they see in society. The problems they face at home are illustrated in their behavior. Lack stemmed from economically challenged households becomes the burden of the child. Broken homes stemmed from divorce or severed domestic partnership attributes to their stresses. Most of these unstable households are due to the interaction between guardians or parents. The relationship(s) of parents filters down behaviors which form bonds with children. A child's behavior will simply mimic the parents. They learn how to cope with conditions based on what they see and hear.

What you communicate to your child will have a tremendous impact on how they approach life. What you say and what you do aren't always the same. They will pick and choose what to follow based on the circumstances. So for example; if you say to a child that you do not condone unmarried sexual relations, yet; they see that you are in an adulterous relationship they tend to believe what they see more than what you say. They will mimic your behavior more than your words. If you say to your child that you do not condone theft, yet; they see that you covet your neighbor's position at work, or perhaps you will lie to get the job promotion. You will cheat to get a store discount. You'll take over an office that doesn't belong to you. You'll go along with the masses to do something that isn't right. You'll stand back and watch an injustice and not get involved to try to stop it. You won't stand for anyone or anything. You cause your child to feel helpless. So when they are suffering from anything they will have no where to go, because you have proven to them that you are powerless. If they get victimized they don't see you and home as that safety zone. Therefore; when they are faced with peer pressure they are more subject to adhere to it, because you have proven that you too go along with the masses whether it is right or wrong, much like a gang. You are teaching them to be irresponsible, not to have commitment, morals or strong values.

You make them feel like you are doing them a favor by handling your responsibility. Often times it is recanted to children within a household, "I go to work to take care of you." Making the child feel as if it were their fault that you have to go to work and put up with what ever it is that you go through on the job so that you can put food on the table. That's your responsibility, not theirs. They did not ask to be here. That was your choice. Your obligation is to take care of them while they are here. Your decisions impact their life then and now. Everyday you make them feel responsible for your choices it adds stress to their life. They have to figure out how to process these emotions prematurely. These are decisions and choices that they should not have to make because they are not, or should not be at that stage of life yet. The stresses of a child should be at the most; how can I defend myself against a bully. Their choices should be what color shirt or blouse should I wear, and how much extra time is required to study to ace the test. Not am I going to have anything to eat when I go home. Am I going to be able to get my school supplies? Am I going to be the only kid without... Or are they going to have to think all day about what they faced at home.

These are not the questions a child should have to face. Although; when your life choices affect them because you were not prepared for the decisions you made, it puts them in a precarious position. All children do not respond the same. Emotions are emotional and they will come out, and that's what you see when you see an at risk child they are merely behaving according to the circumstances that they have had to deal with. Straighten up the living conditions and you will straighten up the child.

Adults have difficulties dealing with some stress. Stress on the job, stress on the road, stress in their marriages or relationships. Children also have difficulties dealing with stress and they have a lot less experience than adults. Stress in an adult causes them to develop hypertension, heart disease and diabetes and sometimes alcohol and drug abuse. Stress in a child causes diabetes, obesity, drug abuse and juvenile delinquency. Stresses develop abuses. Those abuses will evolve into maladaptive behaviors which break down the individual, family and the family structure and ultimately the home.

Being prepared for life should mean that you have developed a plan that will enable you to support the members of your family even through a crisis. This could be a challenge in this day and age, because of the economic situation in this country. How you communicate those stresses to your family is what they will incorporate into their persona. You have the power to make them feel like a burden, a constant reminder and a fixture of your regrets, or like a gift from God, that this world has not yet matured enough to see what they have to offer. You have the ability to make them understand how important their life is to this world. Their contribution is rare and inimitable and that's how they should be made to see themselves. Building up a healthy self esteem will help them develop into young men and women that one day you can be proud of. It's you that is attributing to their circumstances you can't remove yourself from the equation without negating the responsibility for your actions not just theirs. They are simply mimicking what they have learned. If you are the only one around them most of the time, they have learned it from you. If your milieu is healthy and strong, they will also be healthy and strong. If they have to deal with things that they are not prepared to deal with without the proper guidance and support they will buckle and so will you. Giving them the tools to survive is your responsibility as much as it is theirs. You made the commitment to have children and you said you would take care of them, honor your word, because that's what they are expecting.

You made the decision to have children you didn't involve them in that decision because you couldn't, but now that they are here involve them in your decisions concerning them. If you had them without being prepared that could be considered irresponsible, just like it is irresponsible to not take care of them now. Taking care of them is leading by example. Showing them the love and affection they deserve.

Things you can do to improve your life and theirs:

- ✓ Invest in quality time to illustrate to them that they are worth it.
- ✓ Remove the obstacles that form the barriers in your relationship.
- ✓ Get to the source of the problem.
- ✓ Communicate with them to establish where their strengths and weaknesses are.
- ✓ Evaluate the circumstances that are forming the maladaptive behaviors.
- ✓ Analyze the family and where they see themselves as a part of it.
- ✓ Creating roles where they feel responsible, accountable and appreciated within the family unit.
- ✓ Help them to understand their self worth.
- ✓ Create a healthier, stronger peer group.
- ✓ Find a place where they can feel welcomed and accepted
- ✓ Teach them how to live responsibly
- ✓ Find a place where they can develop the proper positive re-enforcement
- ✓ Teach them how to align themselves with value.

Often times a child's stresses are not just from home it is the school, teachers or other children. Not every relationship is a match. It is your responsibility as a parent to find the right match for your child. Making your child feel helpless against the masses will cause them to react to the fears of society. They will begin to develop fears of interacting with society early on and that will become a hindrance to your child. You need to be their hero, when you can be. A child suffers stress due to sleep conditions which causes lack of concentration stemmed from serotonin levels. Serotonin is typically produced in various forms foods, behaviors and emotional states.

Insufficient sleep leads to sleep deprivation. Sleep deprivation is the leading cause of lack of concentration due to melatonin and serotonin levels in the brain. This is also triggered by an unhealthy diet full of not enough protein and not enough exercise. The emotional stresses and twinges of a child will show up in petulance. The serotonin will trigger depression which is exhibited in capriciousness. Making sure the child has a healthy balanced meal and plenty of sleep and exercise will help abate the problem of at risk kids. For more information on this subject and on the factors that mitigate and attribute to at risk kids and at risk adults read; "Teach Me How To Eat" and "I Believe In Knowing" both of these books teach you how some of the factors in this article attribute to behaviors.

Am I Beautiful

It is often said that beauty is within the eyes of the beholder. This is true because it is how you see things that determines what's beautiful to you. Your perspective about life will shape and mold your outlook. It will either motivate you to pursue certain beauty or cause you to miss a certain kind of beauty. Beauty is inimitable. At times it's the state of being and other times it's a form of consciousness. There are many forms of beauty and it's definitely not all within. The type of beauty within a person prompts specific kinds of behaviors. Love, joy, peace, kindness, respect and honor. That's beauty in a category all of its own.

Then there is a physical beauty which is based on things, circumstances and controls. The control that is appreciated that brings an order that causes things to work harmoniously. Like a finely tuned instrument, it's an intonation in an exactitude. It's perfection at its best. When circumstances work well it's truly wonderful it is often referred to as being like poetry in motion; sensational, that's the beauty of organization. It's beautiful to watch people work together, communicate and work within certain controls to form order, it generates respect. Honor and respect is the basis for civilization.

The state of being is a physical condition which permeates a mind-set that triggers behaviors. Those behaviors form customs and traditions which shape our society. When the order starts with a beautiful state of being. The physical contentions develop a system of resiliency.

The conscience form of beauty is being able to see the good where good exist. It's appreciating the natural beauty. The things that are free such as; giving love, attention, respect, honor, a listening ear and time. The ability to look at the beauty in a tree while uncovering the shade of color the texture and tone as it boasts of the crisp clean air that we are fortunate enough to breathe. The flowers that bloom as it shouts of the magnificence of the sun and its dynamic rays of life that it brings in spectrums of efflorescence. The beauty of color as it transposes a dark day into a bright day as it explodes like color on a canvas just waiting to tell a story of life. The purpose of beauty that goes beyond the human eye, but touches the heart and soul of everyone who dares to look within.

To see what is around us is to understand what is within us. You can't see what you don't have. If there is no beauty within, you can't begin to recognize the tremendous beauty that surrounds you everyday. The way you see life is the way you will respond to life. If you do not see what it is worth, then for you it won't be worth anything, until you take the time to uncover the beauty of your world. Even if you are the only beautiful thing in it, you ought to at least be able to see your beauty and that starts with realizing the beauty of the free. Those things that are there for us to see and enjoy, those things that are free. The birds, trees and all those things that are green. The flowers on the trees and everything else in between. You see; those things that are green still have life and so do you, that's a reason to celebrate, there's still something left for you to do. That's beautiful.

Antisana Volcano

Visit the Antisana Ecological Reserve and marvel at Antisana Volcano, part of the Condor Bioreserve. The sprawling reserve is dedicated to preserving the region's rare flora and fauna, including the endangered condor—an important symbol in Andean folklore and mythology. Take in sweeping views of rugged peaks, glacial formations, lava flows and pristine plateaus as you make your way through the area's vast landscapes. After your exploration, sit down for an included lunch at a rustic restaurant serving up authentic local fare.

Overnight Flight1 night

Southeast of Ecuador’s capital city, and cut off from any major road connections, sits the smoldering Antisana Volcano. A strato volcano of the northern Andes, Antisana rises an impressive 5,704 meters into the air, making it one of the highest active volcanoes in the world (but only the fourth highest peak in Ecuador). The volcano is surrounded by the lush landscapes encompassed within the Antisana Ecological Reserve, which is part of the still larger Condor Bioserve. Named for the country’s Andean condor, the 5.4 million-acre bioserve works to protect the farms, ranches, indigenous territories, volcanoes, cloud forests, páramos (high altitude grasslands) and rainforests within its bounds. Its major initiatives include strengthening protected areas, working with landowners to develop conservation-friendly agricultural processes and supporting indigenous people through their “plan de vida” (plan of life) designed to implement local sustainable practices.

beautiful sight is something to be desired and appreciated. Don't forget to enjoy the priceless benefits that should always be a guarantee, safety. The natural parts of life should be automatic. It's Mother Nature taking its course. Protecting yourself should be one of those things that are automatic and whatever you can do to enhance it should be right up there at the top of your list with Mother Nature, it should also come natural.

Being On Top

Being on top requires a certain kind of personality. It doesn't just mean being the biggest and the richest it means being on top of your game. Being the best that you can be is vital to being on top. You have to establish your self in whatever it is that you want to become successful in. You have to be ready to give and receive. You need to be prepared to receive the good times as well as the hard times and to give the most. It requires hard work. If any one ever tells you differently that's a person who doesn't want you to succeed or just doesn't understand what it takes to accede and boffo. Hard work and dedication to anything you want to burgeon in is definitely a must. Able to handle whatever it brings your way is essential. It's called paying your dues. Making sure you have researched and have as much information as possible is one of the primary proponents in achieving your goals.

T rue success is being auspicious in every aspect of your life. Most people obtain success in levels or stages. They have success in their marriage and just a mediocre job. They may have a dynamic career but haven't found Mr. or Ms. Right yet. Then there is the solo artist, as I like to call them, who are and who remains single because they are too busy for love. There are a myriad of reasons why people don't reach the epitome of success in every aspect of their life; oftentimes its timing. Yes; that's right timing is everything. The focus on what's important has to be planned, that's a poignant factor. The problem with that is some people in this category go overboard with their planning. They write down a few "must haves" and "won't haves" and they will not budge. That's good in one way, in another way life is not so rigid. Planning is an essential component to success in everything, although; sometimes things just happen. When it does you have to be prepared and willing to just grab hold of it. Adjust your plans to fit the perfect opportunity. Altering is not compromising it's realizing that everything may not be packaged the way we think it should be, it could be better, and it should be. Exceeding beyond your expectations is propitious; somewhere along the line someone has recognized that you are sagacious. Don't be afraid to re-prioritize. Your priorities will change based on the current events in your life; that won't necessarily get you off track. It merely suggests that there may be a need to re-examine your goals, shift the categories and re-apply the order of things you need to accomplish. There may be some people, things or places that are no longer in your life or not as important. Substitute the factors that will bring you closer to achieving your goals.

Setting your sights high is based on research and planning. It means you have analyzed the situation based on the current and proposed factors, and have come to the realization considering all the information, that it is feasible for you to believe that you can achieve what you desire based on the available information. That's realistic. You've pondered the fact that the importance of achieving your dreams is necessary in order for you to have the perfect life. That's certainly understandable. Everyone is different what's perfect for you may not be perfect for someone else. You need to be cognizant of the fact that it's okay to be different. Remain true to who you are, because that's the only thing that will make and keep you happy. Your happiness is vital to your success. You can't live your life through someone else's. Many times; people simply think that they have to give up one thing to acquire another. If you balance the things in your life properly you can have it all and not get burned out. When you do what you want to do and that makes you happy, it's not exhausting. It is mentally and physically exhausting to not be fully satiated with your situation. Unsatisfied emotions lead to stress and stress causes a lack of adrenalin, which increases blood pressure and that affects the serotonin levels which causes depression. Depression affects your ability to be self motivated. You must be self motivated with healthy self esteem in order to succeed. If your milieu is de-motivating it is harder to excel. It isn't impossible, but it is more difficult to develop the capacity to complete the task without the stamina and tenaciousness to achieve your goals if you do not have the mental or physical energy required to get it done.

In fulfilling your goals you must look at every facet of your life. Determine where you want to be and what it will take to get there. Include as many people in it as you need and add or take away as many as you need, just in case. Most importantly believe in yourself. Not everyone will understand what's important to you and not everyone should. The most important people in your life will need to know because those are the people that God will use to help you make it to where you need to be.

It's possible to have it all, a good family, a wonderful career, a successful marriage or relationship. You don't have to compromise in any area of your life. You just have to plan well, and be willing to adjust. There are a myriad of facets to your life. You have a professional life, a social life and a private life. You should feel fulfilled and well balanced in all of these areas. That is the epitome of success. It's no pressure when you think of it that way because it's obtainable. Even if you are working towards your goals and you are still fulfilled in the pursuit of happiness you are successful. It all depends on who you are and where you are in the scheme of things. Everyone has a place to be at a designated time. When your time comes, you'll get there no matter what if you are working towards it. If you are not then the opportunity will not arise. You'll know what you are supposed to do because it will just come natural to you, and you will love it. You set your own stages based on what you do. That's why for most people success comes in stages, because their behavior dictates what they invest in, and that is typically done in cycles or time slots.

When you realize you are giving too much in one area, evaluate the other areas in your life to ensure that you are making wise choices and keeping a healthy balance. If you look around and there is no one there to spend time with you may want to start the process of finding someone to spend time with. Start developing a relationship before it gets too late. Don't settle for the bottom of the barrel, keep your sights high. Keep an open mind, remember if it were not possible to obtain what you've desired you wouldn't have considered in the first place. You set your goals on things that are obtainable. You adjust your goals on the current factors, but they still should be plausible.

The ideal job is sometimes difficult to obtain based on the current job market, although; if you are serious about what you want to do you will find a way to do it. Internships, volunteer programs and research projects enable you to obtain the benefit of working with some of the most prestigious companies. Perhaps you may not be able to start at the top, but you can start somewhere and that's where you get your start. Smaller companies which offer the ability to learn and grow are an excellent place to start working on your professional goals. You can obtain the experience you need faster and it will help add to the professional pre-requisites while accenting your educational criteria required to get your ideal job with the desired employer. As long as you are able to do what you have set your goals on, initially; it doesn't matter where you are doing it. Its helping you reach your goals.

If you are already at the top and just want to perfect your life, socially join organizations and clubs with great causes to build your character and depth. This will include your network base and enable you to develop your social life and professional career as well. Some clubs are ennui, what I have found that if you are constantly growing and being challenged intellectually, it's hard to get bored. If you are always learning you never stop growing. That's exciting.

Invest in things that you and others can be proud of, especially friends and family. That's important because when you build up yourself you also build up your social structure. It's a great foundation. Planting the right seed in the right places will render the right harvest at harvest time. Its like karma, it will always come back to you. Remember to set some time aside for the most important people in your life, quality time. Make sure you don't make them feel like it's a chore. Take the initiative to find out what's important to them and incorporate what's entertaining, important and exciting to you and them and when you spend the time with them it will be fulfilling for all of you. This may require that you make a chart with the interest of each member of your desired social group and alternate events each time you plan an activity with them. This way each person feels involved and satisfied. Eventhough; you may not all share the same interest, it could be an opportunity to share something new, and its giving them the ability to respect someone else's time and appreciate them for who they are. If you love them, you'll come to love what they do, because who they are, is what they do, and that is what's important to you. That's who you love, them.

If you are looking for the right club or organization Safenets GTD is the perfect organization. It's an excellent cause, you're always learning, therefore; you are always growing and you never get bored. Information is always changing. There's always something new to do, and something new to start. It's a great place to start developing interest.

Opera

Elixir Of Love

Donizetti's classic is a sure hit wherever you decide to view it. You will be pleased. It's a remarkable love story about a doctor who seeks the admiration of a wealthy woman who challenges his heart with a myriad of tactics to test his sincerity and her interest. Dulcamara, whose "magic" potion causes as many problems as it solves will keep you intrigued.

This is Donizetti's classic opera. Adina agrees to marry Belcore (a flashy poker player), Nemorino buys a so-called "Elixir of Love" from self-help guru/quack Dr. Dulcamara to win the heart of Adina before it is too late. Little does he know the "elixir" is simply alcohol. Sung in Italian with English supertitles, the opera features the famous aria "Una furtiva lagrima," made famous by legendary tenor Luciano Pavarotti.

---

San Francisco Ballet

Has a wonderful selection of ballets for July and August, and from July through October 2013. You can also call Ticket Services at 415.865.2000 (Mon-Fri, 10am to 4pm)

2.) SF BALLET TRIOS — Available in August - SF Ballet Trios are pre-selected, themed packages of three ballets.

”Trio” The Choreographer Helgi Tomasson’s Trio is set to Tchaikovsky’s “Souvenir de Florence.” The work, which Tomasson created for the Company’s 2010 Repertory Season according to the Los Angeles Times is deemed “elegant and engrossing.”

”Ghosts” Christopher Wheeldon’s ethereal Ghosts. The London Independent said, “Ghosts is original and astonishingly atmospheric... utterly gripping.”

”From Foreign Lands” The world premiere in March 2013, the New York Times said Alexei Ratmansky’s From Foreign Lands “has original details that show why Mr. Ratmansky is critically acclaimed... “Ratmansky hurtles us from one locale to another with breathtaking velocity, proposing folk elements and spicing them with ballet bravura.”

3.) THERE ARE CREATE YOUR OWN PACKAGES — Available in October-This option is available for people who require and want the flexibility. Check with the San Francisco Ballet for available discounts.

Ballet: NYC Mixed Bill consist of; From Foreign Lands, Classics, Ghost, Beaux. Suite En Blanc, Symphonic Dances, Trio and Borderland

Serge Lifar's iconic Suite en

Blanc features over 40 dancers in a dazzling array of beautiful white costumes. This showcase of French neoclassicism offers “a stunning individual and Hollywood performances. Yuri Possokhov’s “Classical Symphony” is “an exhilarating and bold display of full-throttle academic pure dance with modern accentuations according to N.Y. Times. Edwaard Liang’s “Symphonic Dances “has a youthful primitive energy,” according to the San Francisco Chronicle, the Examiner.com proclaimed the work as “an explosive revelation, an instant classic.” Debuted on SF Ballet’s 2012 Repertory Season, was performed at London’s Sadler’s Wells. Upon its revival this season, The New York Times called “Beaux “ the happiest rethink of masculinity that ballet has seen in decades.” Borderlands dancers were challenge and abounded.

Sample Ticket - Periodically we offer free tickets to Hollywood shows and events, that’s just one of the many perks for staying connected with the source...

- Show Her The Value Of A Good Cause in The Early Stages -

Sizes: ☒ KXS ☐ KS ☐ KM ☐ KL ☐ KXL

When she's at this stage she needs you to make the decisions that will help her reach the other stages in life. That requires the building blocks of the soundest foundation you can give her; that's value.

She's worth going the distance. How far will you go to help support the cause that helps protect her?

It's snuggly soft. It will add to or start the stuffed animal collection, the difference with this one is its teaching them values.

Making a room feel more like home for your little one is building the memoirs they will never forget. Giving them a legacy of the importance of being affiliated with a cause is teaching them early in life how to build strong character.

The depth of a person is more than on the surface, it's what they are made of, that's what establishes who they really are. What people do is who they become. You can get a glimpse of that just by seeing what's important to them.

After they're gone, the memory of them lingers on, it's with the things that they held near and dear that brings back those special times. Making sure you give them something to cherish is important, but when you do it with a point that illustrates a cause is much more important. It's teaching them how to value something that will add quality to their life and the life of others. It's teaching them how to value the right things. The people who care about this world and things in it.

When you are preparing a special meal for that special someone you need a little protection from the little accidents that can occur. No kitchen is complete without an apron. The perfect meal requires all the right tools an apron is part of the right tools. An apron completes your kitchen.

Protecting your clothing from grease and other stains is thinking ahead. It's like making the right investments in the right things, it just makes sense.

Some things are made better from scratch their irreplaceable. The must have's-this is one of those things.

If you've got have it, you may as well get it here.

Some things are too messy to not use protection. Some stains can't be removed. Some things are too precious to take a chance on losing.

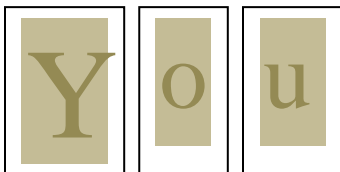

Support the cause that perpetuates the purpose, that you and your love ones are too precious to take a chance on losing.

Preparing Them For The Stages In Life

can't ever stop preparing them for the stages in life, even when they are all grown up they will still come to you for direction. It's only fair that you give them every tool you can to protect them and give them the advantages of a fresh, safe start. That starts with the value of principles and everything you do to instill good morals and strong values. What better way is there to send that message then teaching them the true value of investing in a good cause? Isn't that really showing them that you practice what you preach? That you mean what you say and say what you mean. You can show them, better than you can tell them. It's what you do, that will have the greatest impact on their life. Lead by example. Other than that life is just full of a bunch of stuff that they never really figure out how it is supposed to work.

A Walk in Central Park is perfect for your dog.

A walk in the park could be soothing, comforting and revitalizing. That's what it is for you and your dog. A dog who you invest in becomes your best friend. He always shows you admiration. They're the ones who truly show their affection shouldn't they be rewarded for that. Your lack of affection towards them is like an empty park a beauty that's not embraced.

Some scenes make good memories, so does the times you spend with your dog. Its evenings like this that makes it worthwhile. It's a perfect night for walking a dog. You'll always remember the wonderful evenings when you walked them. The route they took home and the sights you saw along the way. The memories you make with your pet is a keepsake; something to be cherished for a lifetime. We help you make those memories.

When you love your pet you invest in them with long walks, grooming and the perfect attire for them. There's nothing too much for someone you love.

Every moment with them is a treasured moment. Let's face it they are a big part of your life. It shows how big they are in your life by the things you do to show your love. Every opportunity is an opportunity to give to them, and to help keep them safe.

Your purchase of our line of dog apparel will help protect them if they decide stray too far away. Their name on their shirt with your e-mail address, just in case they get lost, this may be the missing piece of the puzzle when they need to find their way home.

Remembering what happened to them may make you more aware of what could happen to you. Wouldn't you want someone to wear this for you?

Living well means being happy and happiness is different for everyone; it's based on your fulfilled desires not anyone else's. Don't let anyone else determine what makes you happy. That's your decision and yours only. Let's face it, when it is all said and done, you are the only one who has to live with you, no matter what you do. Don't you want to be happy?

You have a better chance at true happiness with making the right choices don't let anyone convince you otherwise, no matter what it seems like. Good things happen to good people, who do good things, no matter how it seems.

How does your face compliment your style, because how your cosmetics compliment your face when you apply your make-up is how your face will compliment your hair and everything else about you? It doesn't matter what your hair looks like if your face doesn't compliment your hair, and your hair doesn't compliment your face. But if you have the right cosmetics it doesn't matter what you wear or how you wear your hair, you can rock any style and it just looks beautiful. People will think you are just making a fashion statement.

Every women has a style our goal is to compliment it. What does your style say about you? What does your spending say about who you are?

The things you do and the things you wear say's more about you then you could possibly ever say. Your clothes make a louder statement then any words you could ever speak.

Be proud, wear it loud the statement that's deeper then the surface you. It's not superficial, it's beneficial.

Wear the cosmetics that enhance the real you, the beauty within; because a woman with a cause is unstoppable.

Style is important, just like every important thing you do. Look just as important as you are, with style. Style is comfortable.

The true emphasis of life is what it means to you. You can make anything happen that you want it's all in the way you look at things. It's like leaning on something that really isn't there, yet; for you it's really there; it's perspective. What's your perspective about life?

No matter what you say, it's what you do that counts.

Safenets GTD it's not just a social safety media network, it has a rotary touch and that's important. That should be important to you, of course it's all in the way you look at things. Important people know how to value important things, and when it's important, it doesn't matter what you have to do to become a part of it. It's just important that you do.

Oldenburg's 1976 Clothespin Sculpture in Philadelphia

Famous Sculptures, Statues and Art

Oldenburg designed and orchestrated a message of benevolence when he introduced his magnificent portrayal of a city being knit together, in essence; held together with the help of a giant sized clothespin. This was Stephen Wynn's reflection of his feelings towards the city of Philadelphia when he purchased the clothespin years later. The city was endearing to him and he signified his affection for what he called the city of brotherly love with a wonderful gift that stands as an icon for giving. Oldenburg told a reporter that the clothespin statue had become to him a Bicentennial tribute to Philadelphia. The original purpose of Oldenburg's statue was to support the buildings in the business district. There had to be a percentage of funds contributed to art for any new building, this helped beautify the city. So they chose to work with Oldenburg who was traditionally known for his focus in the theme of ordinary consumables such as; crude papier-mache' facsimiles of ordinary clothing and comestibles; food, pieces of cake and dishes of Jell-O. He was known for original hand paintings it was called Abstract Expressionist-style. He sold his art work not from a lofty art studio, but from a store front New York business. The inspiration came to Oldenburg as he returned home on a flight from New York to Chicago. He always had a clothespin around his studio because he used them as a tool to help keep his sculptured pieces together prior to completion.

The clothespin was designed by Claes Oldenburg and put in Centre Square Plaza, Fifteenth and Market Streets, Philadelphia, installed June 25, 1976. It was inaugurated earlier that month on July 1, 1976.

The clothespin was made of stainless steel and corten steel and it stood forty five feet by twelve feet, and three and one quarter inches by four feet six inches.

Stephen Wynn earned a degree from the University of Pennsylvania and was truly honored at Oldenburg's accomplishment to the city. It stands as a symbol of what we all can do when we pull together and hold it together. The piece for Oldenburg meant one thing and for Wynn it meant something else. Art means something different for each person what it signifies most, is the purpose of the clothespin, holding things together. When it's in a city, it's a city that's holding it together.

Art History written by Nikena Leason June 26, 2013

The vast expressions of an Abstract Expressionist can be illustrated in a myriad of forms as exhibited in this Andy Warhol collection of a Pop Art theme. The many depictions of Marilyn reflect an emphasis of his vision. The eye of an artist portrays the emotion that he feels when he sees an object and that becomes his muse. In the paintings of Marilyn Monroe and Elizabeth Taylor he sees glamour in their hair, the color of their lips, the eyes accentuated with shades of vibrant colors.

The Andy Warhol collection of Marilyn Monroe is on display for Hollywood fans to view. It's a sensational illustration of an Abstract Expressionist style of art. This style of art was also used in a portrait of Elizabeth Taylor.

There are many forms of art; Free-Style, Impressionist, Expressionist, Abstract Art, Art Nouveau, Abstract Expressionism, Optical Art, Unrealism, Fresco, Etch, Portraits, Distempers, Impastos, Monochromes, Miniatures, Pentimenti, Sand Painting, Tankas, Spatterings, Trompe l'oeil, Cityscape, and Watercoloring.

Abstract Expressionism is a form of art that was developed in a New York school which enabled their students to freely utilize abstract paintings. It was one of the first important schools of American painting to develop independently of European styles.

Impressionism is a school of late 19th century French painters who pictured appearances by strokes of unmixed colors to give the impression of reflected light.

Unrealism is a representation having no reference to specific or concrete objects examples.

Distempers are paintings for posters.

Tankas - A Tibetan religious painting on fabric

Trompe l'oeil's are paintings that are created with such deception that it deceives the viewer of its reality.

These are some of the many things that you learn each day with Safenets Going the Distance, you never stop learning, therefore; you never stop growing. We can tell what kind of person you are when you join us. People who are interested are interesting.

*T*his is Expressionist style art. Abstract is more un-unified, less defined. There are other paintings of Marilyn Monroe that illustrates abstract expressionism. This type of abstract paintings occurs in Pablo Picasso's "Women in the Window" in 1936 in a trompe l'esprit. Pablo Picasso displayed many forms of art very much like other artist including Andy Warhol with his Marilyn Monroe painting in the avante- garde gallery; known as one of the great artist of the twentieth century along with Norman Rockwell and Walt Disney. This inspiration of the Marilyn Monroe painting came from Warhol's expression of painting of things he liked. They called it Pop Art; it was Andy's way of showing things are alike. This painting was painted in flavors of yellow, orange, and mint because of Warhol's earlier paintings of the Campbell Soup cans. He depicted the flavors of the soup. So when he began to paint the Marilyn Monroe paintings he transferred the same concept to the paintings to the portraits displaying his style as an original form of art. He had a concept of things that taste good, and things in good taste. Warhol believed that there was a fine line between the things our appetite for fine art and our appetite for sex, food, and glamour. The theory was that if a guy sought a girl he would seek her based on the glamorous depiction of Marilyn Monroe because that's how they portrayed her as the epitome of glamour. Sex appeal and glamour made her bigger than life. Her image created a sensationalism that was considered eye candy, and every man wanted one. She portrayed the things that are most appealing based on perception. It's the image that's associated with the desire. It's the conditioned stimulus. Even if it is his own version of his personal Marilyn it was her who started the desire and interest.

The way Andy Warhol created the photo of Marilyn was quite unique at the time. He laid down the "flavor" color on a canvas primed. Then he applied a preliminary black photo silkscreen of Marilyn Monroe; he then began painting the irregular fields of color that indicates the actress's face, hair lips, eyes, teeth and blouse. Then another edited version of the silkscreen was placed on top of the painting over these colors. Warhol proceeded painting some final grace notes, the art portion of the photo. It was a way that the actual art work of Andy seemed to move over and under the photographic image of Marilyn. The painting and the picture were coexistent but not amalgamated.

The paintings were eventually acquired from Warhol in 1962 by Irving Blum, at that time Irving was a director of an art gallery called the Ferus Gallery. Later it was acquired by Stephen Wynn for the Bellagio Gallery of Fine Art.

What Kind of a World Will They Live In?

What kind of world will they live in, is a very important question. Most people don't consider that when they make decisions they will affect our tomorrow. The political decisions they make today will impact their lives more than you could possibly imagine. The moral commitments we make to one another will also affect their lives forever. It is the blue print to life that we are giving them. It is the standard of living that is forming their tomorrow. How we interact with one another is the basis for the bond in society that will dictate their values.

It is a road map to the nuances in life that our economy will revolve around. The volatility of society as it responds to the standards we set is what will create the strength or weaknesses they will inherit. It is in every decision that we make that characterizes the direction we will take based on what we deem valuable; that becomes society. It is when it is not understood that society makes decisions that impact our future and not regard it as such, or when decisions are made in a flagrant disregard for humanity, that it cost us the most valuable assets we have the bond of strength and unity in truth. Those are the times when we err to the point that it attenuates the masses.

Cognizance of what creates auspiciousness and what generates fragility is a symbol of nimbleness and strength revealed in sapience. Many adapt the attitude that the importance of tomorrow is miniscule in comparison to the sorrows of today therefore it is moot. We never know how long we will be inhabitants here, but whether we are here or not if we have descendants they will be and if we care about them we ought to care what happens to them. It is our descendants who will be stuck with the mess some have created as a result of narcissism, ignorance or simply irresponsibility. The attitude for some is that this society has become cold and callous to the point that an early departure is inviting. Therefore; the care and the wellbeing of those left here is irrelevant. It is sad when it's disappointing to feel apart of your world. It is even more disappointing to loose hope and live in a state of despair. It's a sad place when the world is no longer rewarding because of the state or condition of it. When people no longer value it as a safe place to live and they cannot appreciate what it has to offer because what they see is hostility and disorder. When they don't feel apart of the structure that is being created because it does not emulate the values we were founded on, it will no longer be respected as such. When those values dissipate we can no longer be called the country by that name. We have abandoned our title and our right to be the origin of etymology. It becomes merely a sobriquet.

The ills of society are depicted and illustrated in the choices we make. When our choices affect the masses it should be carefully considered how, who and when it will impact them. The long term affect is the most poignant factor of all. It is also prudent to determine what you are working with in order to establish how it will work which is something that is oblique from our current order.

The way we respond to truths and order is the mode of operandi that forms our societal order. It becomes our culture and custom. When that order is in a state of disrepair, based on an attitude of irresponsibility and an avoidance of the truth we send a message to all who are watching that our strength is not in the things that we value, because we have no value. Our flaws are then reflected as fragility. A terse banal statement that we are easily swayed – morals that can be bought and sold, it's just a matter of the price and that becomes the banner that others see, that eventually becomes our flag. The flag represents what the country stands for, what they believe in, their source their strength. What the masses do in any country is what they believe in, if it's disorder it evolves into a weakness, hence; they become fragile. That society becomes a serf to disorder by precedence. It is only when you have the strength to stand up for what is right and practice that strength that you can be regarded as a value.

Those who do not stand up for what is right and discourage those who want to do what's right are opprobrious. They ruin it for the masses when they do not respond to proper order. It is like standing back and watching someone put the world on fire and only observing. We all have to live here, make it a comfortable place for us all. Stand up for something good, and you stand up for us all. When you do that you make this world worth living in for those who are here now and those who will be here in the future.

IS OUR GOVERNMENT TOO BIG TO FAIL

In a recent meeting with the Federal Reserve Board they discussed the Federal Capital Proposal. The results of that meeting led to the decision to raise the buffer to protect the capital in the banking system. The Federal Reserve board with Benjamin Bernanke and Jeremy Stein explored a myriad of resolutions for extending the amount of funds present within the banking system to avert a financial collapse in the event that banks are no longer able to sustain their solvency. This system seems to be a form of insurance exhibited with the bail-out with AGI. The FDIC is the consumer insurance for the banking system, but when that system fails what protects the consumer? These companies were set in place to help support the banking systems assets. When these agencies are no longer solvent and the banks have not received an adequate return on their investments we reap the burden of a failed system depicted in inflation. We also see banks that do not have sufficient funds to release to its depositors, as experienced recently in Greece.

Governor Jeremy Stein stated that the asset purchase of $85 billion per month is substantial and, in his opinion, will be used responsibly. Bernanke and Stein believe that the flow base and state contingency will enable continued purchases for now.

Last September 2012 the unemployment rate was 8.1 and now it is 7.6 according to the Federal Reserve Board. These are the factors that affect our economy. Variables and the things which cause these variables in the market, like discounts and bond market volatility were noted as the most viable components that determine our strength. Stock flow and redemption rates were poignant determinate factors in this meeting. The inflation rate is currently below 2%. In forecasting the inflation rate the factors which control the volatility are mitigated. This is a strategy used to restore the market back to its resilient state. According to the reserve board the fund rate will be raised to 6.5.

The chairman of the board of Federal Reserves position was regarding the monetary policy. Their goal is to provide substantial improvements to establish clarity and resolve. The effort to move asset prices and control market volatility is essential. The reaction in the market is based on the Libor and other spending derivatives. The current administrative initiatives are to implement policies which avert the factors that are forcing this economy to decline.

At the most recent meeting an analysis of the market was taken into consideration at a think tank to force the value of currency up to strengthen foreign investment. The competing markets are shared unilaterally therefore the demand for American trades is mitigated due to the volatility of the labor market and the percentage of available infrastructure to support the existing projects. Their primary objective was to form a stronger defense mechanism against a failed banking system; a financial buffer. The demand for a threshold to protect the substantial financial cache is a sagacious and nimble approach.

Central banking and supporting data for forecasting is necessary, although the long term perspective is evident for determining the success of the preparations made today to sustain the market in the future. There still remains an underlying question; it's the stand on the current state of the market, which is a priority and has to be considered foremost and forthright. More focus on the current state of affairs in the American economy is essential to boost economy and improve inflation rates. These factors are vital in order to correct this market so that we will survive the future financial market based on our current goals.

The Libor has shown some private manipulation and has some impact on the current economy therefore new systems will be reviewed to offset the private and public complications in the Libor fund. The problem with the fragility of the Libor is that this affects our prime rate. The prime rate is what controls the spending for the country. It also dictates investments thus; controlling the American investment portfolio and that is what helps determine the value of our currency. As we have seen in recent months the Japanese Yen has been intentionally devalued, at least that's what was reported. The problem with manipulating the value of any currency is it sends a false sense of security therefore; affecting the import export business. We cannot confidently invest in Japan's economy if we don't have a clear and concise understanding of what we are investing in. It's the cooking the books theory. A strong economy has to reveal its strengths and a weak economy has to depict its attenuation. This is the only way either system can be strengthened.

Our World Trade system is based on the volatility of both markets and caveats are generally put in place to sustain and offset any short term or long term crisis. What happens when those systems fail, we see inflation rates change suddenly and drastically, thus; affecting spending power. Spending is spending and it has to maintain an even balance, without symmetry the rates will not reflect the market and the market will not encourage spending. An emergent of concatenations evolve in our economic structure that depicts the strength of our country and our world.

Too big to fail is the Federal Reserves perspective. Title II and FDIC, will facilitate a senior debt requirement. This they believe will build a stronger banking system. What makes them believe they are too big to fail? It's the whopping $85 billion that makes them believe they are too big to fail.

The government will not easily bail out the banking system this time if these funds are depleted, which could end our economy as we know it. The assurance that the Federal Reserve gives is the guarantee that they have forecasted the economic situation to ascertain an adequate financial disposition that enables them to accurately dictate the economic situation of this country. Their confidence on the amount of financial strength is based on what they believe it will take to make and maintain this system in order. These funds are being deposited back into the same banks which were not able to handle the previous short or long term funding obligations. The solution is to establish a system that will make these consumer banking systems accountable for the funds they are being entrusted with.

The other factors that affect our economy are a current 3% growth and the 2% growth for the headwind against the housing market. Based on the underlying factors we hear the Federal Reserve Board state their confidence in the market which is a very good position to be in when it's valid. It encourages consumer spending and higher investments, but in reality what the current market reflects is the inability to show a plan of action to support, sustain and preserve the "too big to fail" funds. The $85 billion per month is lofty and while it does suggest strength as we have learned in the not so distant past that the bite is bigger than the bark. In other words; how we spend those funds and the strength of the things we invest in will either increase those funds or deplete them. If it is the latter it forces this economy into a tail spin putting us right back where we started ten years ago when this financial debacle began.

The 0% interest on savings discourages savings, yet; it encourages borrowing. For example; the commodities market is based on fruits and vegetables, (i.e. agricultural market) and yet; the rates will not reflect the proper spending habits when the stock doesn't flow. Forecasting the flow in this fund is labyrinthine because the factors are volatile.

The only way to gauge spending, currency, and stability is to understand the true source of the market. A fictitious source will depict ambivalent, fallible and inconclusive forecasting thus; leading to an unstable economy.
